Treasury Secretary Henry M. Paulson, Jr. to deliver policy address on China

Secretary Paulson's remarks to include the global economy and financial markets, economic relations with China and the U.S.-China Strategic Economic Dialogue (SED).

Treasury Secretary Henry M. Paulson, Jr. will be the keynote speaker at the annual gala of the National Committee on U.S.-China Relations on October 21 in New York. Secretary Paulson, who will be honored at the event along with Duncan L. Niederauer, Chief Executive Officer, NYSE Euronext, will speak on the global economy and financial markets, economic relations with China and the U.S.-China Strategic Economic Dialogue (SED).

“In the midst of the most serious financial crisis in more than a half century, and with the presidential election exactly two weeks away, Secretary Paulson’s address comes at a time when global economic issues are touching the lives of every American and U.S.-China ties are more important than ever,” said Stephen A. Orlins, president of the National Committee on U.S.-China Relations. “We are pleased to honor the accomplishments of Secretary Paulson and Mr. Niederauer, and to recognize the contribution their work has made towards strengthening the Sino-American relationship.”

Henry M. Paulson, Jr. became Secretary of the U.S. Treasury in July, 2006, and has served as the leader of the U.S. delegation to the U.S.-China Strategic Economic Dialogue since its inception in 2006. The SED has initiated work on central policy issues that include investment, energy and environmental cooperation, and food and product safety. Secretary Paulson has traveled to China more than 60 times over the course of his public service and private sector careers.

Duncan L. Niederauer joined NYSE Euronext in April, 2007. Under his leadership, NYSE Euronext became the first non-Chinese exchange to open a Representative Office in Beijing and increased its number of listed companies from Greater China to 57, representing a market capitalization of more than $1 trillion.

The National Committee on United States-China Relations is the leading national, non-partisan public affairs organization devoted exclusively to building constructive and durable relationships between the United States and China. The Committee’s continuity of experience and depth of associations in Greater China and the United States make it a national resource. The Committee creates opportunities for informed discussion and reasoned debate about the issues of common interest and concern to the United States, the People’s Republic of China, Hong Kong SAR and Taiwan.
